Crowd turnout was good Saturday despite periodic inclement weather for the Morgan City version of the Louisiana Music Cavalcade. A dozen local performers joined some of the state's top musical talent on a stage in the city's historic downtown Lawrence Park. Louisiana Secretary of State Fox McKeithen spearheaded the festivities, part of a 10-city tour, with plenty of local help from the Morgan City Main Street board. For local hopefuls, the Cavalcade also holds the promise of fame. Three local acts earned the chance Saturday to perform at "the big show" in Shreveport that will have the attention of state and national television stations. Local winners were River's Edge in the band competition and Abbie Romero and Calyn Swords, who tied in the vocalist competition.
